

"One of the most important things we can learn about the younger generation is their strong need for community, relationships, and connection. Our philosophy in reaching them has to be connection-driven." Rob Warren

Come, learn from one who already is reaching the post-Christian generation with the gospel.

Rob Warren, is a Pastor of h2o church at BGSU. His focus/roles are teaching/preaching, leadership development, and collegiate reaching strategy. H2o church is focused on collegiate church planting, believing that if we reach the campus with the gospel, we can reach the world. Rob is a 2012 Master of Divinity graduate of Winebrenner Theological Seminary. He was a keynote speaker at this year's CGGC Great Lakes Regional conference. Rob serves as campus director for FCA (Fellowship of Christian Athletes) at BGSU and as the Chairman of the Southern Baptist Convention Collegiate Evangelism Committee. Rob is the husband of Lisa and the father to Lily.

From August/September Church Advocate Interview with Rob Warren/Don Dennison

Don: “Christianity Today recently reported that 80% of Southern Baptist churches baptized one (or fewer) young adult (age 18-29) in 2013. Their leaders admit they are not being effective in winning and discipling the next generation. In your opinion, why is that happening?”

Rob: “There seems to be a resistance to progress and change, which I would consider necessary for growth in any capacity. What worked at one time is not working now. If we are going to reach people we haven’t reached, we’re going to have to do things we haven’t done. Many of us don’t know how to engage with this younger generation, and we have got to learn—much like what you do with overseas ministry. We have to learn the culture and be willing to do things that we wouldn’t normally/traditionally do. It’s like trying to chop down a tree with a dull ax. Some of us might be working really, really hard, but we’re not working smart. We need to be in tune with what’s connecting with them and keep them in our ministry focus.”
